Event Details: The Trust is kicking off National Tree Week by holding a special tree planting event at their Shewalton Wood wildlife reserve in Irvine on Saturday 28 November.

Shewalton Wood is a large area of woodland, grassland and wetland accessible from a path circuit five kilometres in length. It is a great place to see all kind of wildlife, particularly deer, amphibians and birds of prey. Broad-leaved woodland is expanding naturally over parts of the site but the Trust is keen to accelerate this process by planting thickets of alder, willow and aspen.

Running from 10.00-15.00, this is a fantastic chance for people with all levels of experience to get involved in practical conservation in their local community. The event will increase the number of tree species as well as provide woodland cover for our native wildlife.

First launched in 1975, National Tree Week is the UK's largest tree celebration annually launching the start of the winter tree planting season. This a great chance for people to do something positive for their local treescape.

The Scottish Wildlife Trust Ayrshire Community Engagement Officer, Harry Richards, said: “National Tree Week is the perfect opportunity for people to be a part of the actual planting in their local area. The Scottish Wildlife Trust hopes they will feel attached to the new woodland as it grows and matures.
